

Contributors

Flávio da Cunha Rezende

Flávio da Cunha Rezende obtained a Ph.D. in Planning and Public Policy from Cornell University (USA) in 1999. He is currently professor at the Social Sciences and Political Science Department of the Federal University of Pernambuco (UFPE). He is currently a National Council for Scientific and Technological Development (CNPq) researcher and coordinates two major academic research groups. He is a member of the Teaching and Research Committee of the Brazilian Political Science Association (ABCP). His latest book, "Por que falham as reformas administrativas?" was published in 2004 by Editora FGV. His main research interest is the problem of institutional change under new institutionalism and rational choice in political science. He has published several comparative articles in national and international journals. He has also worked on several applied research projects about reforms and institutional change sponsored by the World Bank, Department for International Development (UK), Inter-American Development Bank, United Nations Development Programme, Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and Ministry of Planning, Budget and Management (Brazil).

Email: rezzende2005@gmail.com